1. Open an image in Photoshop. Photoshop opens automatically by default. If you've saved the image as a JPEG, it opens in Adobe JPEG Viewer. As with most programs, the Image/Open dialog box appears. All of the files in this chapter were opened from these dialog boxes. 2. To view the image or window, double-click in the Image/Window area. When you double-click an image, the screen displays that image. You can also double-click an image in the folder to view that image if you want. Don't click on an image to open it. Because the image shows up with the Image/Open dialog box, you can simply double-click the image in the dialog box to see what the image looks like. When you import a new image into Photoshop, you see a thumbnail of that image, too. Double-click the image thumbnail to see the full-size image, and then double-click in the full-size image to see the image in the image editor. Double-clicking an image also brings up the Image/Open dialog box. 3. Use the controls on the top of the screen to format the image. You can zoom the image to see more of it, drag the image around to change where it's located on the screen, change the size of the canvas, rotate the image to make it face you, and so on. (The next section explains more about changing the size of the canvas.) If you don't have any tools on the screen, click the toolbar icon at the top of the screen to see what's on the toolbar. See the next section for more information about the different items on the toolbar.

Q: How to add values to a List from another List? I have two List and I have to add the values from List one to another List. Here is the sample code:- class Class1 { private List myList1 = new List(); public List MyList2 { get; set; } public void AddList() { for (int i = 1; i myList2 = new List()); public List MyList3 { get; set; } public void AddList(Class1 class1) { for (int i = 1; i ()); So the instance is being created to the default, no-parameter constructor - that's why you can assign to the property MyList2 and the assignment is not blowing up. If you change it to a new-() instead of a new not-named-with-parameters constructor, the program will throw. Note that if you made MyList2 a readonly property instead of an auto-property, the compiler would have flagged the assignment here as well (and you would have not gotten it working). A: The problem is that you

Q: How do I add a registry in AITestCase? I'm writing some automated tests for our IBM Watson services. I'm using Rubocop to enforce coding style and also to help me prevent SOLID. I need to know how to add a registry to AITestCase. In Ruby this would be done via the method'register'. Here is my implementation so far: class AITestCase include RuboCop::Cop::Style include RuboCop::Cop::Lint::EmptyStyle def register(name, types) cop_config.each do |cop| cop.include_elements = types end notify_all 'Code: Modules, Classes, Consts' end def ignore(name) cop_config.each do |cop| cop.exclude_elements = name end notify_all 'Code: Modules, Classes, Consts' end end I have also tried: def register(name, types) cop_config.add_policy('Register', :visibility => :public, :name => name, :types => types) end But that gives me an error: 'Coverage: Register::Types is undefined'. What is the correct way to do this? A: I found that you can pass the Cobertura: reporter to your instance of AITestCase. require 'bundler/setup' require 'rubocop' require 'rubocop/cop' require 'rubocop/cop/ruby/cobertura' class AITestCase include RuboCop::Cop::Style include RuboCop::Cop::Lint::EmptyStyle def initialize(reporter) @cobertura = reporter end #... end Then any of the methods in here will trigger cobertura reporting. More information is available here. is about to enter its endgame because it doesn't have any money left in its budget.
