It is essential in the diagnosis and treatment of infertile couples and to clarify the infertility factors of the couple. In order to accurately explain the infertility history and to give the right advices, the fertility care providers are required to have a good understanding of the definitions of the natural and the artificial causes of infertility. Reproductive health is not only about pregnancy and childbirth, but it is also about freedom from the physical, social and emotional burdens of childbearing. Access to quality reproductive health services is essential for a woman to decide freely on the timing and the number of children she wants. Reproductive health also includes protection from sexual and other types of violence and the promotion of a healthy sexual relationship. Who are "social media influencers"? The term is most often used to describe people in a specific field who regularly post messages and news via social media sites like Twitter, Facebook, Google+, Pinterest and blogs. Influencers are often popular online celebrities who are perceived to be influential in their target social group. Influencers are thought to have the capacity to influence consumers' opinions or perceptions through their celebrity standing, but not primarily through their writing ability. This two-hour workshop will be more than just a simple sharing of information about infertility: It will be a comprehensive online conference from 2 pm Wednesday, July 29, till 6 pm the following day. An online case presentation will be facilitated, covering the various aspects of infertility that a person can be dealing with, including a general awareness of the diagnosis, screening, treatments, outcomes of various infertility treatments, adoption
